

Adam Daniel Mezei

Hailing from the metropolis of Toronto, Canada, Adam Daniel Mezei first set foot in the Czech lands in 2002 and hasn't looked back a day since. Based in Prague, he often goes by a variety of titles -- entrepreneur, freelance journalist, author, screenwriter. Host of the popular weekly podcast, "The Knowledge," available at Prague's largest portal for the English-speaking international community, Expats.cz, Mezei's past show guests have included prominent members of the Czech diplomatic and business community.

Having penned articles in the past for such notable expatriate publications like the Prague Post and Czech Business Weekly, Mezei is also the award-winning author of the British Czech and Slovak Association's (BCSA)'s 2006 Writer's Competition for his "Mayor Sulc's Astonishing 2010 Directive," a story which appeared in his latest anthology "We Are the New Bohemians: The Post-Communist Collection." Mezei is also quite proud of his Czechoslovak roots. His father is a native of Kosice, Slovakia, and Mezei often returns to the Eastern Slovakian city to visit with family and friends. While English is his mother tongue, Czech and Slovak are also favourite languages, so please don't be shy.