

CURTIS M. WONG

Curtis M. Wong is a staff writer in the news department of The Prague Post. A Connecticut native, he spent four years in New York City before re-locating to Prague in fall 2005. After a year as a steady contributor, he joined the Post's news team -- where he covers crime, politics, travel, culture and other local goings-on -- in July 2008. His work has appeared in The Hartford Courant (Hartford, CT), Packed Magazine (Salzburg, Austria), Akron Jewish News (Akron, OH) and Business Insurance Weekly (New York, NY). In his ongoing love affair with the European continent, Curtis names Munich as his "first love," Amsterdam as his "soul mate" and Prague as his "significant other."
